Current Progress at the Site

An Environmental Indicator (EI) inspection was conducted in April 2004 to determine if human exposures to contamination and migration of contaminated groundwater are under control at the facility. Mentioned in the inspection report were several soil removals that were a result of leaking underground piping from an aboveground storage tank (AST) in 1993 and a pressurized release of asphalt oil from another AST in 2003. Residual contamination at levels below concern remained in place in isolated areas from both spills but pose minimal risk to any receptor; therefore, it is highly likely that both EIs are under control at this facility.

Site Description

The Atlas Roofing facility is located on approximately 25 acres in the Penn-Am Industrial Park in Quakertown, Bucks County, Pennsylvania. The facility began operations in 1979 and manufactures shingle roofing, roll roofing, and felt underlayment for shingle and roll roofing.
